

Nationaløkonomisk Tidsskrift – The Danish Journal of Economics

Guidelines for authors

Established 1873, Nationaløkonomisk Tidsskrift is one of the oldest economics journals, e.g. older than Quarterly Journal of Economics (est. 1886), Journal of Political Economy (1892), American Economic Review (1911), Econometrica and Review of Economic Studies (both 1933).

The main purpose of the journal is to present well-founded scientific analysis relevant to the Danish economy and to stimulate an informed debate. Articles should be as accessible as possible and aim to communicate the results to a broad audience of economists.

Editorial correspondence and books for review should be sent to:

Nationaløkonomisk Tidsskrift – The Danish Journal of Economics, from this point on, the journal, invites manuscripts in all areas of economics. We publish both articles and commentary. The articles may be part of the journal itself or included in special theme issues thereof.

The following principles apply.

1. Authors should submit a PDF version to the editors.
2. No paper submitted to the journal may be under consideration for publication at another journal. Furthermore, the submitted paper must represent original work and should reference and describe prior work on the same subject and compare the submitted paper to that work.
3. The editors may reject a manuscript without obtaining a referee report from an outside reviewer if the paper is considered unsuitable for publication in the journal. Reasons for such a decision may include the quality and originality of the analysis, suitability of the topic for a general-interest journal, etc. Prior to submission, authors are advised to consult previous issues to judge suitability according to the types of articles published in the journal.
4. Articles that are not immediately rejected by the editor will usually be subject to review by anonymous referees. Referees are asked to determine the appropriateness of the manuscript for publication. In this regard, the aim of the journal is to publish papers that make a concrete contribution to scientific investigations of the Danish economy or that communicate central research results to a broad Danish audience. Quality and originality are important criteria.

5. Manuscripts submitted to the journal should be in Danish or in English and no longer than 35 truly double-spaced (not 1.5 spaced) pages, including references, figures and tables. Please note that the manuscript will be returned for adjustment prior to review if this guideline is not followed.
6. The title page should include the names and affiliations of the authors, an abstract not exceeding 100 words, JEL codes and keywords.
7. References to articles and books (including the first names of all authors cited) should be listed at the end of the article; references in the text to this list should be made by year (in parenthesis).
8. Footnotes, formulas and figures should be numbered consecutively throughout the text and acknowledgements denoted by an asterisk.
9. Graphs, tables or figures in the manuscript should be designed to remain clearly readable in black-and-white.
10. Supplementary derivations, explanations and statistical tests which, although not intended for publication, could facilitate the referees' work, may be enclosed.
11. Proofs should be carefully checked by the author and returned within a week or as agreed with the editors.
12. Articles will appear online at www.nøt.dk. The online site is presently Open Access.

The journal invites commentary in all areas of economics. The following principles apply.

1. Authors should submit a PDF version of the manuscript by e-mail to the editors.
2. The editors may reject a manuscript if the paper is considered unsuitable for publication in the journal. Reasons for such a decision may include the quality and originality of the analysis, suitability of the topic for a general-interest journal, etc. Prior to submission, authors are advised to consult previously published commentary at www.nøt.dk to judge suitability according to the types of commentary published in the journal.
3. Commentary that is not immediately rejected by the editors will be subject to the review by the editorial board. The editorial board is asked to determine the appropriateness of the manuscript for publication. In this regard, the aim of the journal is to publish commentary that makes a concrete contribution of policy relevance to the Danish economy or that has the potential to spur a debate relevant to a broad Danish audience.
4. Manuscripts submitted to the journal should be in Danish or in English and no longer than nine truly double-spaced (not 1.5 spaced) pages, including references, figures and tables. Please note that the manuscript will be returned for adjustment prior to review if this guideline is not followed.
5. The title page should include the names and affiliations of the authors.
6. References to articles and books (including the first names of all authors cited) should be listed at the end of the article; references in the text to this list should be made by year (in parenthesis).
7. Footnotes, formulas and figures should be kept to a minimum and numbered consecutively throughout the text. Acknowledgements should be denoted by an asterisk.
8. Proofs should be carefully checked by the author and returned within a week or as agreed with the editors.
9. Commentary will appear online at nøt.dk. The online site is presently Open Access.

Special themed issues

Finally, the journal invites suggestions for special issues where guest editors handle the editorial process of collection and reviewing articles under a common theme. Special issues can contain articles that are shorter, than typical journal submission.

Guest editors must contact the editors for approval of theme and suggested list of contributors before initiating a special issue.

The following principles and guidelines apply for special issues:

1. The focal point of special issues is the theme.
2. Since the theme is the focal point, it is advantageous if contributions come from authors affiliated with different institutions and across various events.
3. Articles should be relatively short – typically 10-12 pages – but must be scientifically well-founded. In addition, articles should comply with the standard requirements for submission (c.f. the section on submitted articles above).
4. It is expected that the guest editors can oversee the initial peer review process for the articles.
